Regional and International Cooperation for Promoting Research and Education for Sustainable Development in Africa

By Mohamed H.A. Hassan
Executive Director, TWAS – the academy of sciences for the developing world
President, AAS – the African academy of sciences

ABSTRACT

The presentation addresses the role of regional and international cooperation in promoting science-based sustainable development in Africa. It will first highlight a number of important challenges and emerging opportunities for promoting scientific research and education in the Continent.

This will be followed by highlighting important examples of how regional and international cooperation are contributing, through various networks, to building research and education capacities in Africa.
